STATWAY is a two-semester alternative to the traditional sequence that would be required to complete a transferable math course. Students work with real world problems in a cooperative group setting using a modular approach to learning the concepts.