BACKGROUND:
Launched in 2007, this is the 10th Student Success Day at San Diego City College. More than 5,000 students and parents have received assistance in facilitating the steps to begin college as a first-time student.

Adams Jones

While growing up in Southeast San Diego, Jones excelled at football, basketball and baseball. Jones graduated from Morse High School in 2003 after leading his high school team as both a pitcher and a shortstop. Jones currently plays for the Baltimore Orioles as Center Fielder.

Jones was just named the 2015 Marvin Miller Man of the Year by the Major League Baseball Players Association. The award recognizes one player for his combination of on-field performance and community dedication. This year, Jones has been presented with a Governor's Service Award by Maryland Governor Larry Hogan, and at the Legends for Youth dinner in New York City he received the MLB Players Association's Brooks Robinson Community Service Award for bettering the lives of youth in a community — an honor named after the Orioles Hall of Fame third baseman. Jones has also been the Orioles nominee for MLB's top humanitarian honor, the Roberto Clemente Award, in 2013 and 2011. In 2011, he won The Baltimore Sun Media Group's Tim Wheatley Award, presented to a Baltimore-area athlete that gives back to the community.

Quintin Berry

Born in San Diego, Berry Quintin played baseball, football and basketball at Morse High School in San Diego. Berry played one season of baseball at Grossmont Junior College before moving on to San Diego State University (SDSU). Berry's head coach at SDSU was former major leaguer and Baseball Hall of Fame member Tony Gwynn.[2] He was named to the All-Mountain West Conference first team in 2005 and the second team in 2006. Berry has played for the Chicago Red Sox, the Detroit Tigers, and the Chicago Cubs.
